Vol. II

It is now twelve years since Vol. I of "A Critical Pāli Dictionary" was brought to a conclusion by the issue of the Epilegomena in 1948. At no time during the intervening years was the intention of continuing and completing the great lexicographical work wholly abandoned, but an estimate of the wide scope of Vol. I of the CPD was at the same time a recognition of the enormous amount of work that remained to be done. As it was evident that the immense task widely surpassed the powers of Danish or even Scandinavian Indology, the continuation of the dictionary work after 1948 mainly consisted in a revision and re-arrangement of the material for the purpose of making it accessible to a wider circle of scholars.

HELMER SMITH died 9/1 1956 after some years of failing health; HANS HENDRIKSEN, since 1944 his co-editor, had organized and directed the work in Copenhagen after he had succeeded POUL TUXEN as Professor of Indology in 1951; but a consideration of the disproportion between the exacting work and the time he could devote to it forced him to resign his editorship a year after HELMER SMITH's death; he accompanied his resignation by a detailed account of the state of the work and outlined a scheme for a future resumption of the work on an international basis. The Commission of the Royal Danish Academy of Sciences and Letters for the CPD (then as now consisting of Professors K. BARR, L. L. HAMMERICH, and L. HJELMSLEV) welcomed the plan of continuing the work on an international basis, and in June 1958 L. L. HAMMERICH, Chairman of the Commission, brought the matter before the session of the Union Académique Internationale (UAI).

In the meantime the 24th International Congress of Orientalists at Munich, August 1957, had passed the following resolution: "This present 24th International Congress of Orientalists considering the urgent need of the Critical Pāli Dictionary undertaken by the Royal Danish Academy for every worker in the field of Buddhism as well as Indology and Indian Linguistics in general, expresses the hope that the said Academy with the assistance of the Royal Danish Government will take the necessary steps for a resumption of the work on the Critical Pāli Dictionary and ensure its speedy completion." And in 1958 a grant from the Rask-Ørsted Foundation enabled the Commission for the CPD to invite a number of Pāli scholars from different countries to attend a conference in Copenhagen (September 1958) to consider the prospect of the work on an international basis and draw up a preliminary plan for the future work. It was the unanimous opinion of the scholars invited from abroad that the dictionary work must be continued in Copenhagen, having as its foundation the copious and critically collected material compiled by Trenckner and amplified by the editors of Vol. I of the CPD; the Danish participants called attention to the great difficulty caused by the impossibility of deciding now what texts unknown to Trenckner were thoroughly represented in the collections of the dictionary; it was agreed to meet that difficulty by an excerption undertaken by various scholars of a number of texts representing the different strata of Pāli literature; but on the other hand it was a general wish that the edition of Vol. II should not be delayed by waiting for the collection of new material.

The deliberations of the Conference have formed the basis of the drafting of the general rules for the international collaboration. The publication of the CPD will also in the future be undertaken by the Royal Danish Academy of Sciences and Letters through an Administrative Commission consisting of members of the Academy, at present K. BARR, L. L. HAMMERICH, and L. HJELMSLEV; the scholarly work will be carried on under the direction of a Supervisory Committee, for which the following Indologists were elected at the Conference: L. ALSDORF (Hamburg), H. HENDRIKSEN (Copenhagen), I. B. HORNER (London), G. P. MALALASEKERA (Colombo, at present Moscow), and which was in March 1960 joined by H. HUMBACH (Saarbrücken).

The academies which are members of the Union Académique Internationale have been invited to join the work by appointing Pāli scholars from their own countries as collaborators in the dictionary work. This must necessarily be continued and completed by joint efforts according to a plan the details of which still remain to be worked out, but which in its general outlines was approved by the UAI at the session in 1959, at which a proposal was adopted to recommend the inclusion of a subvention to the CPD in the budget of the UNESCO; this recommendation was transmitted to the session of the CIPSH (Conseil International de la Philosophie et des Sciences Humaines) in September 1959, at which L. L. HAMMERICH was present. There it was decided to propose to the UNESCO to grant an annual subvention of 3000 dollars to the work of the CPD, a proposal to be treated at the general assembly of the UNESCO in December 1960.

The UNESCO subvention is applied for as a supplement to the expenses defrayed by the various academies; the financing of the work is mainly based on the principle that each participating academy pays the scholars it places at the disposal of the dictionary work. The Supervisory Committee has the right of approval of the collaborators. The Royal Danish Academy of Sciences and Letters has reason to believe that it will further be able to pay—besides the Danish collaborators—both the cost of print, the rent of working rooms, and office expenses, as has hitherto been the case.

The Royal Danish Academy of Sciences and Letters will be able to do this, if, as it is hoped, the Carlsberg Foundation (Copenhagen) will continue to give as liberal subsidies as it has done in the past, especially to pay the work of the Danish collaborators. We are exceedingly grateful for all that the Carlsberg Foundation has done for many years for the benefit of the Critical Pāli Dictionary.—It is also to be hoped that the Rask-Ørsted Foundation (Copenhagen) will in the future as in the past give occasional subsidies to ensure the cooperation of Danish and non-Danish Pāli-scholars.

The Academy of Mainz (Akademie der Wissenschaften und der Literatur, Mainz) was the first to join the general plan. Thanks especially to the efforts of Prof. HELMUTH SCHEEL, the General Secretary of the said academy, it has been possible to release Dr. HERMANN KOPP (Heidelberg) from other duties and persuade him to take up the dictionary work in Copenhagen, where he has devoted his full working-power to the cause of the CPD for more than a year; the Academy of Mainz (supported by the Deutsche Forschungsgemeinschaft) has co-operated with the Heidelberg Academy (Akademie der Wissenschaften, Heidelberg) in this matter, and it is hoped that Dr. KOPP will be able to carry on this important work.

Also the Czechoslovak Academy (Československá Akademie Věd) has joined the work for the continuation of the CPD. At the suggestion of Prof. J. PRUŠEK (of the said academy), supported by Dr. HOLUBEC of the Czechoslovak Ministry of Education, it was arranged that Dr. IVO FIŠER, Lecturer at the Charles University of Prague, should spend a month in Copenhagen (October 1959) to acquaint himself with the work; he at once joined in the collaboration and will be able to continue his work for the CPD from Prague.

Preliminary negotiations have been conducted with other academies, but it will take some time before international collaboration under the auspices of the UAI will be fully organized. In the meantime the Commission for the CPD has by correspondence and personal contact established connection with a number of Pāli scholars who may one day be active collaborators, and thanks to a grant from the Rask-Ørsted Foundation the Commission could invite the Sinhalese Pāli scholar, Dr. C. E. GODAKUMBURA (then Senior Lecturer at the University of London) to be the first collaborator from abroad in the renewed work; Dr. GODAKUMBURA spent a month about New Year 1959 in Copenhagen, dividing his time between the elaboration of plans for the future work and the drafting of some of the first articles for Vol. II. Dr. GODAKUMBURA will also work for the CPD in the future, as far as his office as Archaeological Commissioner of the Government of Ceylon leaves him time.

At the Conference in Copenhagen in September 1958 the possibility of including other lexicographical collections in the edition of the CPD was mentioned. Attention was especially called to the comprehensive collection of lexicographical slips left by W. GEIGER. Mrs. GEIGER was ready to meet the wishes of the Royal Danish Academy, and entrusted Prof. H. HUMBACH, Saarbrücken, and his assistant Dr. H. BECHERT (who is editing other literary work left by GEIGER) with the arrangement of the utilization of the material with the Danish Academy; for this purpose Dr. BECHERT visited Copenhagen in January this year, and an agreement was made according to which GEIGER's valuable collections will be regularly included in the CPD from fasc. 2 of Vol. II; the first fascicle was already in the press, when Dr. BECHERT visited Copenhagen, but he has taken the trouble to make some additions to the proofs. It is to be deeply regretted that Mrs. GEIGER did not live to see the arrangement for the inclusion of W. GEIGER's lexicographical collections in the CPD carried into effect; she died on Jan. 25, 1960; the trustee of the heirs, Prof. RUDOLF GEIGER, approved of the arrangement and welcomed the publication of his father's collections under the general scheme of the CPD, for which the members of the Commission wish to express their gratitude.

Since Dr. H. KOPP accepted the appointment by the Academy of Mainz, the work in Copenhagen has been carried out by him in connection with the Danish collaborators, F. MØLLER-KRISTENSEN, M. A., ELSE PAULY, and N. WARMDAHL, who, however, have so far been able to give only part of their time to the dictionary work; the publication of fasc. 1 of Vol. II is the result of the joint efforts of the workers in Copenhagen, Prof. L. ALSDORF, Hamburg, Dr. C. E. GODAKUMBURA, Colombo, and Dr. IVO FIŠER, Prague. Mrs. PAULY has had the special task of coordination and has given valuable assistance to the Administrative Commission.

At the preparation of the articles the system of Vol. I has, naturally, been followed, but a detailed plan for the coordination of the work has still to be worked out, and a completely uniform arrangement has not been possible in the present circumstances.

In agreement with what was decided at the Conference in 1958, a scheme has been drawn up according to which a number of important or typical texts, belonging to the different strata of later Pāli, should be systematically excerpted by scholars from various countries; but it will take some years before the enlarged material is at hand; in the meantime, rather laborious investigations of texts must be undertaken—and have been undertaken—at the drafting of the articles; in spite of all efforts, this way of adding to the material is not satisfactory, and it is to be hoped that from the beginning of the consonants the enlarged material will form the basis of the published work.

The collaborators wish to express their gratitude to the Pali Text Society for the publication of the "Pāli Tipiṭakam Concordance", which has been a great support in the work, and which has supplied a number of references; at the same time it should be stressed that the CPD does not pretend to give all canonical references, and thus by no means renders the Concordance superfluous even for the published parts of the CPD.

The Royal Library of Copenhagen and the University Library of Uppsala have placed a number of books at the disposal of the CPD; the Commission and the collaborators are very grateful for receiving that liberal help, which is much needed, as it will take some time before the library of the CPD will be sufficiently enlarged to supply the books necessary for the extended work.

Many eminent scholars both in Europe, in America, and in Asia have shown an active interest in the progress of the work at the CPD and have assisted the Commission in various ways at the reorganization of the work; it is our hope that in a few years the united efforts will have created powerful collaboration of competent scholars from the East and the West, who will be able to complete the great work in about twenty-five years.

HELMER SMITH

26th April 1882—9th January, 1956

At the death of HELMER SMITH the Critical Pāli Dictionary has lost one of its prime movers and the study of Indian philology a characteristic figure, a scholar of exceptional learning and penetration.

HELMER SMITH was born in Stockholm in 1882.*) Having taken the degree of M. A. (fil. lic.) at the University of Uppsala in 1908, he became Reader (docent) in Indian Philology at the University of Lund in 1921 and in 1936 was appointed Professor of Comparative Philology and Sanskrit at the University of Uppsala.

HELMER SMITH received the honorary doctorate from the University of Lund in 1925. He became an honorary member of the Société asiatique of Paris in the same year, a foreign member of the Royal Danish Academy of Sciences and Letters in 1927, and an honorary member of the Royal Asiatic Society of Ceylon in 1949. This last honour which he received in his old age gave him special satisfaction.

When DINES ANDERSEN and HELMER SMITH in 1924 began the edition of the Critical Pāli Dictionary, they had both been active as editors of Pāli texts, and to some extent they looked upon this work as preparatory to their lexicographical project. They had jointly edited the Sutta-nipāta in 1913 (new and revised edition succeeding the editio princeps by FAUSBØLL) and the two small grammatical texts, Dhātupāṭha and Dhātumañjūsā in 1921. DINES ANDERSEN had published the Pāli Reader, containing some hitherto unedited texts, and HELMER SMITH the Paramatthajotikā in four volumes in 1915 to 1918. In 1925 he was called upon by the Pali Text Society to edit the commentary on the Yamakavagga of Dhammapada, that part of NORMAN's work being out of print. And in 1928 followed the first volume of his monumental edition of the grammatical work Saddanīti, of which five volumes have appeared, the sixth and last volume (c: 5,2 — word-index continued) being in preparation by Dr. NILS SIMONSSON in Uppsala. The text itself is voluminous, taking up three volumes, in all 928 pages. To this HELMER SMITH added in the following volumes very important aids: concordances to Aggavanīsa's Saddanīti and the works of other Pāli grammarians, indexes of words and quotations, and a chapter called Conspectus terminorum, but being in reality a detailed systematic account of the doctrines of the Pāli grammarians. The character of this chapter, remarkable for its penetration and precision, will easily escape notice, since the author with characteristic modesty has camouflaged it so well, but as a matter of fact it ought to be considered an indispensable introduction by anybody studying the Indian grammarians.

His whole intellectual disposition qualified HELMER SMITH for philological studies. His keen intelligence and quick comprehension permitted him to master languages and to surmount interpretative difficulties with exceptional ease. In Sanskrit, Pāli and Prākṛit his reading was extensive; he studied a number of modern Indian languages and literatures, especially Sinhalese, Hindi, Tamil, Burmese; and besides he was an excellent classical scholar and possessed a very good knowledge of Old Norse language and literature.

HELMER SMITH's editions bear the same stamp of mastery as do V. TRENCKNER's Pāli publications. They are based on a broad examination not only of manuscripts, but also of parallel texts and commentaries in Pāli, Sinhalese, and Burmese. Besides, metrical studies are included as further correctives in establishing the text.

The Critical Pāli Dictionary benefited by HELMER SMITH's ability as a textual critic. Besides drafting articles, making excerpts from unexamined texts and adducing Sinhalese and Burmese commentary passages he saw it as one of his obligations in his dictionary work to give a critical examination of the quotations. He badly felt the deficiencies of a number of Pāli editions, and a great many of his articles contain important textual emendations. In this connection may be mentioned the valuable appendix to the first volume of the dictionary, the Epilegomena, which is his work and which contains a lot of bibliographical information not easily obtained elsewhere.

HELMER SMITH spent several years in Paris, where he became an intimate friend of J. BLOCH and other French linguists and philologists. In 1926—27 he gave at the request of the French Minister of Education a series of lectures on "Le bouddhisme de langue palie" at the Sorbonne. Otherwise a great deal of his time in Paris was devoted to linguistic studies. He was strongly influenced by the thoughts of French linguists at the time who did not study a language as an isolated unit, but saw it in its relation to other cognate and geographically adjoining idioms as a product of the interplay of foreign and native forces. In connection with his Pāli readings he began at an early date to study Sinhalese, and in 1930 he read a paper in the Société de linguistique de Paris, giving the solution of a much discussed problem of Sinhalese sound history

(see his article "W. Geiger et le vocabulaire du singalais classique", Journal asiatique 1950 p. 190). It is characteristic that it was certain features of Swedish which led him to his theory. W. GEIGER in the preface to his Grammar of the Sinhalese Language 1938 has acknowledged it in the following words: "By his ingenious observation of the influence exerted on the phonology by heavy or light syllables Professor HELMER SMITH has considerably enhanced our knowledge of Sinhalese vocalism". With this one should compare SMITH's own statement loc. cit. "Cette observation qui ne pouvait ne pas s'imposer à un autodidacte en singalais littéraire qui savait tant soit peu de vieux suédois", and it will probably be agreed that one could hardly imagine modesty carried farther. It is typical that only in 1950 did HELMER SMITH publish his views on Sinhalese in the above-mentioned article, but then the result was a fundamental contribution containing a wealth of observations and dealing with most aspects of the language; its affinity with other Indo-Aryan languages, its vocabulary (discussing influences from Pāli, Tamil, Sanskrit), phonology and morphology. It will remain an important source of information in all future research on Sinhalese. Another weighty linguistic contribution is "Le futur moyen indien et ses rythmes" (J. as. 1952) where a new interesting explanation of certain Middle Indo-Aryan future-forms has been given. In a number of articles in the two journals of the Société de linguistique from 1932 to 1935 HELMER SMITH has treated other problems from Middle and New Indo-Aryan languages. The series of three articles called "En marge du vocabulaire sanskrit des bouddhistes" contains observations on text-criticism, vocabulary, and stylistics of texts in Buddhist Sanskrit.

Through his editorial work HELMER SMITH saw the importance of metrical studies for the establishment of the texts, and after 1950 he published several articles on the subject.

HELMER SMITH's publications are not easily read. One has a feeling as if they were written at a breath, the style is elegant, but condensed to the extreme, almost hurried. His way of writing reflects his lively, enthusiastic, but also nervous and restless mind. He could be rather sarcastic in his judgment of others. But everyone who has had the benefit of learning to know this exceptionally gifted and witty man, remembers his loveliness and his unselfishness. If a certain shyness would often prevent him from publishing his ideas, he generously communicated them to colleagues orally and in letters, and many scholars have had occasion to thank him for suggestions, to mention a few, J. BLOCH in L'indo-aryen, W. GEIGER in his Grammar of the Sinhalese Language, and the present writer in the Syntax of the Infinite Verb-forms of Pāli. He was a prodigious letter-writer. This was his natural medium, here he felt altogether free and easy, and he would subject his friends to veritable bombardments with letters, small wonders of wit and learning, teeming with acute ideas and flashes of humour. DINES ANDERSEN collected the letters he received from him and they are now incorporated in the library of the Critical Pāli Dictionary.

Even if HELMER SMITH's publications, discounting the text editions, were not extensive, he has nevertheless exercised considerable influence through the originality of his works and through the many suggestions he made to others. His greatest achievements were no doubt his Sinhalese contributions and his edition of and commentary to the Saddanīti. By them as well as by his work at the Critical Pāli Dictionary his name will be remembered for a long time to come.

WILHELM GEIGER

July 21, 1856—September 2, 1943

WILHELM GEIGER was a scholar who covered an unusually wide field of research and who, as a pioneer, opened up new ways and fields of study. Therefore, his lifework cannot be described simply in terms of Pāli philology. We have to recognize three main parts of at least equal importance in his work: his Iranian studies, his Pāli studies, and his studies of Ceylon and the Sinhalese language. In this dictionary, however, we can deal only with his Pāli studies, and especially with his contribution to Pāli lexicography. To a certain extent, though, his studies of Ceylonese history cannot be separated strictly from his work on Pāli, because the earlier Ceylonese chronicles have been handed down to us in the Pāli language.

GEIGER, who was born in Nuremberg in 1856, studied Oriental languages under FRIEDRICH VON SPIEGEL at the University of Erlangen. SPIEGEL was (after the Norwegian-born CHRISTIAN LASSEN) the first German Pāli scholar and the first German scholar to edit Pāli texts ("Kammavākyā, liber de officiis sacerdotum Buddhicorum", 1841; "Anecdota Pālica", 1845) and to collect materials systematically for a dictionary of Pāli. The manuscript of this dictionary ("Lexicon Palicum", 2 vols., 282 and 260 pp.) was never published. Later, SPIEGEL turned to Iranian philology and never returned to Pāli philology. When GEIGER studied under him, he had already put aside his Pāli studies.

GEIGER took the degree of Dr. phil. with a thesis on an Avestan text ("Die Pehlevi-version des Ersten Capitels des Vendīdād") in 1877. Shortly afterwards he published a study in the field of Western Classics: "De Callini elegiarum scriptoris aetate" (1878).

It is still referred to in modern handbooks of Greek literature. But soon he concentrated on Oriental studies again and became lecturer (Privatdozent) in Erlangen after he had presented his edition of the Aogemadaēcā (1878) as his "Habilitationsschrift". Although GEIGER was forced to earn a livelihood as a teacher of Latin and Greek at the Gymnasium at Neustadt an der Haardt from 1880 to 1884, far away from any large libraries, he published a series of very important studies mostly of Iranian languages, literature, and history. In 1884, GEIGER was appointed teacher at the Maximilians-Gymnasium in Munich, besides which he was also a lecturer at the University of Munich from 1886. During this time he won the intimate friendship of ERNST KUHN and of MARK AUREL STEIN (later Sir AUREL STEIN).

Although GEIGER continued his work on Iranian subjects for some years after he had become Professor of Comparative Philology at the University of Erlangen in 1891, as the successor of SPIEGEL, he now began to develop an interest in Pāli and Sinhalese. He himself has described this turning point in an unpublished autobiographical manuscript with the following words:

"Die Übersiedlung nach Erlangen bedeutete zugleich meinen Übergang von der Iranistik zur Indologie. Wie ich auf iranischem Sprachgebiet vom Altertum (Awesta) bis zur modernen Zeit mich durchgearbeitet hatte, so wollte ich nun einen ähnlichen Weg auf indischem Gebiete gehen . . .

Meine indologischen Studien nahmen von Anfang an die Richtung auf das Singhalesische. Das kam so. In Erlangen studierte bei mir zu Anfang der 90er Jahre ein junger Singhalese, DON MARTINO DE ZILVA WICKREMASINGHE. Er . . . machte sich (später) um die Inschriftenkunde wirklich verdient . . . Es versteht sich, daß wir oft zusammen über seine Muttersprache und ihren damals noch nicht so recht aufgeklärten linguistischen Charakter uns unterhielten. Während ich mich nun zunächst in das Pāli, die heilige Sprache des in Ceylon noch lebendigen Buddhismus, einarbeitete, wurde in mir der Wunsch lebendig, selber nach Ceylon zu reisen und die singhalesische Sprache an Ort und Stelle zu studieren. Ich konnte ja hoffen, damit zugleich meine alte Sehnsucht, fremde Länder und Völker, insbesondere die Tropennatur kennen zu lernen, aufs beste zu befriedigen."

On November 18th, 1895, GEIGER started on his first journey to Ceylon which he vividly described in his book "Ceylon, Tagebuchblätter und Reiseerinnerungen" (1898). Shortly after his arrival in Colombo, in answering the questions of a Ceylonese journalist in Colombo about the purpose of his visit, he said (according to an article "Professor W. Geiger in Colombo" published in a Ceylon newspaper):

"I have been sent . . . to study Sinhalese, especially for scientific purposes. I hope to find out whether it comes under the category of Aryan languages or not. That is still a subject of dispute among leading men in Europe, and I have come to see if I can settle that bone of contention."

And he could. In 1897 he published a treatise on the language of the Roḍiyās in Ceylon, in 1898 the first (German) edition of his etymological glossary of the Sinhalese language, and in 1900 his "Litteratur und Sprache der Singhalesen". He himself wrote of the importance of his journey:

"Daß die Reise mir außerordentlich viel bedeutete, versteht sich von selbst; sie wurde aber geradezu entscheidend für mein ganzes weiteres wissenschaftliches Leben. Ceylon ist meine Arbeitsdomäne geworden . . ."

Again, his studies of Ceylon led him to an intensive study of Pāli. We may refer here to his own words once more:

"Aber Ceylon hatte es mir nun angetan; nicht nur seine Sprache, sondern auch seine Geschichte und seine Kultur. So versteht es sich, daß ich in die Pālisprache mich besonders vertiefte . . . und in den Mahāvamsa, die [damals] in recht unvollkommener Ausgabe und Übersetzung vorliegende Chronik der Insel. Ich habe sie denn auch in je 3 Bänden neu ediert und übersetzt. Die englische Regierung in Ceylon hat dieses Werk finanziell unterstützt und mir auch im Jahre 1925/6 eine große [zweite] Reise nach Ceylon und durch die verschiedensten Teile der Insel ermöglicht, auf der ich die notwendige lebendige Anschauung der Schauplätze mir aneignen konnte, wo die verschiedenen geschichtlichen Begebenheiten sich abspielten."

GEIGER's edition and translation of the "Great Chronicle" (Mahāvamsa), a masterpiece of critical philology, was published between 1908 and 1930. Further he contributed to our knowledge of Pāli literature by investigations into the sources and development of the Pāli chronicles in his book "Dīpavamsa und Mahāvamsa und die geschichtliche Überlieferung in Ceylon", 1905 (English translation by ETHEL M. COOMARASWAMY: "The Dīpavamsa and Mahāvamsa and their historical development in Ceylon", Colombo 1908), and also in a number of papers ("Noch einmal Dīpavamsa und Mahāvamsa", ZDMG 63 p. 540 ff.; "Die Quellen des Mahāvamsa", ZII 7 p. 259 ff.; "The Trustworthiness of the Mahāvamsa", IHQ 6 p. 205 ff., etc.).

When GEIGER was already reputed to be one of the most eminent Pāli scholars, two tasks fell to him: first, to lend his assistance to the plan of an international Pāli dictionary and, secondly, to write a grammar of Pāli.

"The Pāli Text Society's Pāli-English Dictionary" by T. W. RHYS DAVIDS and WILLIAM STEDE was to a certain extent the result of the abandonment of the plan for an international Pāli dictionary. Such has been hinted at in the foreword to that dictionary (p. VII) and in the preface to "A Critical Pāli Dictionary" (Vol. I, p. IX f.). WILHELM GEIGER was requested as early as 1903 to co-operate in the work on the dictionary. According to the plan as published by T. W. RHYS DAVIDS in the Report of the Pāli Text Society for 1909, GEIGER, with M. BODE as co-worker, was to become the author of volume III comprising the letters P-M. GEIGER had later extended his collection of lexicographical materials, originally a list of words from the Pāli chronicles, and he started to collect words and references from various other texts, especially from some parts of the Vinaya, parts of the four Nikāyas, Dhammapada, Udāna, Suttanipāta, Jātaka with its commentary (especially vols. I and III), Dhammapadaṭṭhakathā (I.1 and III), Dāḥavamsa, Hatthagallavihāravamsa, Rasavāhinī, etc. Soon he realized that it was useful not to restrict his collection to the labials only, but to collect materials for the whole of the alphabet.

In 1916 ERNST KUHN, who was appointed author of volume I after the death of EDMUND HARDY, wanted to retire from this job and asked GEIGER to take over this part of the task, too. KUHN wrote to GEIGER in a letter dated January 30th, 1916:

“Um nun nicht den Vorwurf auf mich zu laden, daß ich bis zu meinem Tode die Genossen in Buddha an der Nase herumgeführt habe, bin ich entschlossen, das gesamte bei mir befindliche Material vertrauensvoll in Ihre Hände zu legen mit der herzlichen Bitte, an meiner Stelle die Bearbeitung zu übernehmen. Es sind dies zunächst HARDY's Sammlungen zu den Vocalen mit ergänzenden Aufzeichnungen des Ehepaares RHYS DAVIDS und HARDY's wie PISCHEL's Exemplare des CHILDERS mit wertvollen handschriftlichen Nachträgen. . . . Die von mir begonnene Arbeit an den Artikeln a bis akhaṇḍa behalte ich einstweilen zurück, um sie lesbar abzuschreiben und dann Ihnen gleichfalls zuzustellen.”

GEIGER agreed and accordingly intensified the collection of materials for the dictionary. Communications between the scholars of different nations being cut off by the First World War, he could not know, of course, that the plan for an international Pāli dictionary was already out of date. In Copenhagen, at the same time, DINES ANDERSEN (who had been appointed author of volume IV of the planned international dictionary) and HELMER SMITH conceived a plan of editing a Pāli dictionary based on the materials left by V. TRENCKNER without the aid of foreign collaborators. Thus they started “A Critical Pāli Dictionary” (see CPD, vol. I p. X). Independently T. W. RHYS DAVIDS decided to supply a provisional dictionary to be written as fast as possible in England and to be edited by the Pāli Text Society, a task performed with the help of WILLIAM STEDE in 1921—1925.

In this situation KUHN and GEIGER in October 1919 decided to aid the progress of the Pāli Text Society's dictionary by sending all the materials that had come into their hands (as specified in KUHN's letter reproduced above), including KUHN's Pāli collections, to T. W. RHYS DAVIDS. Furthermore, they asked the Bavarian Academy to pay the amount set aside from the “Hardy-Stiftung” for the Pāli Dictionary to the Pāli Text Society (see also PED, Foreword p. VIII). GEIGER's own collections, however, remained with him, and he continued enlarging them. After GEIGER's death HELMUTH VON GLASENAPP was the first to mention GEIGER's “umfangreiche Zettelsammlungen, die ein gewaltiges Wortmaterial umfaßten”, in his obituary in ZDMG 98 p. 183. Mrs. MAGDALENE GEIGER entrusted HELMUT HUMBACH and the writer to take care of these collections. I may refer readers to the Preface to Volume II of “A Critical Pāli Dictionary” p. III for the agreement of January, 1960, with the Royal Danish Academy that led to the inclusion of GEIGER's collections in the CPD from Volume II. GEIGER's work now can serve the purpose for which it was originally intended: to help in the preparation of a Pāli dictionary by international collaboration of scholars. It might be mentioned here that GEIGER's Pāli Dictionary is written on paper slips measuring 10.4×8.5 cm. For each reference the meaning of the word is stated.

Although GEIGER's Pāli Dictionary was to become useful for the public only many years after his death, his grammar of Pāli has been an indispensable book since 1916 for every Pāli scholar. This book, too, has a somewhat remarkable history. Originally it was RICHARD OTTO FRANKE who was invited in 1893 to write a grammar of Pāli as part of the "Grundriß der Indo-Arischen Philologie und Altertumskunde" ("Encyclopedia of Indo-Aryan Research"). In 1902 FRANKE started to publish studies of some special problems of Pāli philology ("Geschichte und Kritik der einheimischen Pāli-Grammatik und -Lexikographie"; "Pāli und Sanskrit") and to prepare concordances to the verses of several Pāli texts, but the completion of the grammar was delayed longer and longer. A grammar of Pāli, however, was urgently needed at once then. After FRANKE had given up the task, JACOB WACKERNAGEL as the editor of the first part of the "Grundriß" entreated GEIGER to write the grammar immediately. GEIGER did not refuse to help, and in 1916 his "Pāli, Literatur und Sprache" was printed.

It has later become a standard work. Its translation into English by BATAKRISHNA GHOSH (including some important additions by GEIGER himself) was published by the University of Calcutta in 1943 and reprinted in 1956. The collections gathered by GEIGER for the dictionary were, of course, a valuable help for the fulfilment of the difficult task of writing the first (and till this day the only) comprehensive grammar of Pāli based on the study of texts. I need not repeat recommendations of it by scholars like HELMER SMITH and FRANKLIN EDGERTON reproduced in another place (Editor's Introduction to GEIGER, Culture of Ceylon p. XV f.), but I may mention here that recent grammars of Pāli have not been able to add any important new materials from Pāli texts to those reproduced from GEIGER's book. Not less remarkable than the completeness of his grammar is the transparency of the arrangement and the clearness of the expression and of the formulation of the rules found by him. The limitation of size for this volume of the "Grundriß" prevented him from including an examination of the syntax, but he left an unpublished manuscript with collections for a syntax of Pāli ("Sammlungen zur Syntax des Pāli").

In 1918 GEIGER, jointly with his wife MAGDALENE GEIGER, edited and translated the second section of the famous collection of stories called Rasavāhini ("Die zweite Dekade der Rasavāhini"), the first section of which had already been published by SPIEGEL in "Anecdota Pālica" (1845). In 1920 MAGDALENE and WILHELM GEIGER published a treatise on the meaning of the word dharmā which has become one of the indispensable handbooks of Pāli philology ("Pāli Dhamma vornehmlich in der kanonischen Literatur"). An important addendum to this work is his study "Dhamma und Brahman" (1921), and for some years he continued the series of Pāli studies culminating in a translation of Volumes I and II of Saṃyutta-Nikāya ("Saṃyutta-Nikāya, die in Gruppen geordnete Sammlung aus dem Pāli-Kanon der Buddhisten zum ersten Male ins Deutsche übertragen", Vol. I, 1930; Vol. II, 1925). He succeeded in presenting a translation remarkable both for the utmost preciseness and for the beauty of the language employed.

In the meantime GEIGER was invited to succeed KUHN in the chair of Indology and Iranian studies at the University of Munich in 1920. A few years later, after he had passed the age of 68, he retired from his chair and spent the rest of his life in the small village of Neubiberg near Munich. Many honours were conferred upon him during these years: in 1926 he was appointed Corresponding Fellow of the British Academy, in 1929 Honorary Member of the American Oriental Society, in 1930 Honorary Member of the Ceylon Branch of the Royal Asiatic Society, in 1934 Honorary Member of the Deutsche Morgenländische Gesellschaft, in 1935 Honorary Member of the Société Asiatique in Paris, and in the same year Honorary Member of the Royal Asiatic Society of Great Britain and Ireland. Even as far as Japan, his name was celebrated now: in 1934 a Japanese medal in memory of the 2500th anniversary of the Buddha's birthday was conferred on him as one of only seven scholars in the field of Buddhist studies who were deemed to deserve this honour.

And there was no interruption of his prolific work after his retirement. But during the last 15 years of his life GEIGER concentrated more and more on studies of Ceylon, and therefore he no longer published works on Pāli philology in the strict sense of the word. His notes about the interpretation of difficult passages in the Pāli canon and about the development of the Buddhist doctrine in the canonical books remained unpublished. One of GEIGER's letters written in Pāli to A. P. BUDDHADATTA Mahāthera, however, has been published by this Sinhalese scholar (A. P. BUDDHADATTA, Śrī-Buddhadatta-caritaya, Colombo 1954, p. 147f.) and since then, it figures as a part of the standard materials in Ceylonese school books on Pāli (e.g. A. P. BUDDHADATTA, Aids to Pāli Conversation and Translation, Ambalangoda s.d. p. 130f.).

But even in his Ceylonese studies GEIGER did not lose contact with Pāli philology. First, he completed the redaction and translation of the Mahāvamsa, the first part of which had already appeared in 1908, as mentioned above. In order to help this undertaking, the Government of Ceylon invited him to visit the island in 1925/6. And after he had agreed to become director of the "Dictionary of the Sinhalese Language" in Colombo he went to Ceylon in 1931/2 for a third time. In this task he closely collaborated with HELMER SMITH, who, invited by GEIGER, joined as a director of that dictionary in 1936. After the completion of "A Grammar of the Sinhalese Language" (1938) and other important contributions to Sinhalese philology, he again concentrated on a study of the Mahāvamsa, but now for an entirely new purpose, namely to investigate mediaeval Sinhalese culture. When he had succeeded in completing the manuscript of "Culture of Ceylon in Mediaeval Times" in 1940 (published in 1960) and in providing an examination of the Sinhalese syntax in "Studien zur Geschichte und Sprache Ceylons" and "Beiträge zur singhalesischen Sprachgeschichte" (1942), he had achieved the rounding-off of his lifework, as it had been his aim from his youth.

LUDWIG ALSDORF

8th August 1904—25th March 1978

As announced briefly in Fascicle 10 of Volume II of A Critical Pāli Dictionary Professor Dr. LUDWIG ALSDORF died on 25 March 1978, at the age of 73.

Professor ALSDORF's early work was mainly in the field of Jaina Prakrit studies, and both his thesis (completed at Hamburg in 1928 under the supervision of WALTHER SCHUBRING) and his Habilitationsschrift (presented at Berlin in 1935 under HEINRICH LÜDERS) were concerned with Jaina Apabhraṃśa texts. His Apabhraṃśa-Studien, published in Leipzig in 1937, showed his continuing interest in this field. After a number of appointments in various German universities before, during, and after the Second World War, he was invited in 1950 to succeed his teacher SCHUBRING at Hamburg, where he remained until his retirement in 1972. He continued to teach there, as Emeritus Professor, until his death.

Although Jaina studies were his main interest in his early years, his publications show he was by no means restricted to this field. He wrote about Vedic matters, made major contributions to the study of the Aśokan inscriptions, and also worked in the field of Buddhist, and especially Pāli, studies. His first major Pāli study was 'Bemerkungen zum Vessantara-Jātaka', published in 1957 (WZKSO I pp. 1–70). In this long and masterly article he examined the problems which this important text presents, and succeeded in proposing solutions to many of them. His interest in the Pāli Jātaka collection was shown very clearly by the way in which he returned to it again and again in subsequent years. In the next two decades he published studies of the Sivi-jātaka ('Das Sivi-jātaka', Pratidānam, Den Haag 1968, pp. 478–83), the Vidhura-jātaka ('Das Jātaka vom weisen Vidhura', WZKS 15, 1971, pp. 23–56), the Chavaka-jātaka ('The impious Brahman and the pious Caṇḍāla', Buddhist studies in honour of I. B. Horner, Dordrecht 1974, pp. 9–13), and the Bhūridatta-jātaka ('Das Bhūridatta-Jātaka', WZKS 21, 1977, pp. 25–55).

In these studies of the Jātakas he relied heavily upon his investigations into the metre, which proved no less an invaluable help for textual criticism than it had already been for his Jaina Apabhraṃśa studies. These investigations enabled him to distinguish between the older parts of the stories and the later accretions, as well as to select correct readings from the welter frequently offered by the manuscript traditions. Hearing in 1966 that a reprint of the edition of the Thera- and Therī-gāthā by HERMANN OLDENBERG and RICHARD PISCHEL was about to be published, he offered to the Pali Text Society the first fruits of a critical study which he was making of the Āryā metre in the Pāli canon. These emendations appeared as Appendix II to the reprint, and were followed in 1967 by Die Āryā-Strophen des Pali-Kanons, in which he dealt with the Āryā verses in the other Pāli canonical texts.

These Pāli metrical studies reflected his growing involvement with Volume II of A Critical Pāli Dictionary. His realization of the need for the completion of the project, which had seemed to be defunct after the completion of Volume I in 1948, was probably accentuated by his study of the Vessantara-jātaka, although as a student of Middle Indo-Aryan he was undoubtedly convinced of its importance for all such studies. At the XXIVth International Congress of Orientalists at Munich in 1957 he joined with others in proposing a resolution urging the Royal Danish Academy to take steps to resume work on the Critical Pāli Dictionary and bring it to a speedy completion, and he attended the conference in Copenhagen in 1958 at which the decision was taken to recommence the dictionary on an international basis.

In 1959 he was elected to the Akademie der Wissenschaften und der Literatur at Mainz, which was one of the sponsoring academies of the reborn Dictionary. His annual reports to the Kommission für Indologie of that Academy from 1960 onwards show his concern not only with the progress of the Dictionary but with the provision of adequate source materials for those who were preparing articles for it. Year after year he stressed the importance, for the progress of the Dictionary, of the indexes to Pāli texts which were being compiled by Dr. HERMANN KOPP, who was the Academy's nominated collaborator on the Dictionary project.

Appointed, from the start, a member of the Supervisory Committee which supervised the rebirth of A Critical Pāli Dictionary, he contributed to the first fascicle in 1960 and again to the fifth fascicle in 1969, but his really important contribution to the Dictionary began with the latter part, when he became Editor-in-Chief. He thereafter devoted more and more time to the task of imposing uniformity upon articles written by contributors from different language and cultural backgrounds, with varying approaches to the subject, who interpreted in their own ways the guidelines which they had been given. This led to a situation where the role of the Editor-in-Chief developed in such a way that the typescripts for the eighth and ninth fascicle were prepared in their entirety for the press by LUDWIG ALSDORF. Work on the tenth fascicle, for which he was also preparing much of the typescript, was far advanced at the time of his death.

That work on the Dictionary did not come to a complete halt at that moment was due to ALSDORF's foresight. Realizing that the physical task of preparing the Dictionary for the press was taking up an increasingly large proportion of his time, and fearful that this would reduce his chances of producing all the books and articles he had in mind to write, he had asked the Administrative Committee to give thought to the problem of finding someone to help him in this task. They had in 1976 asked the present writer if he would be willing to do this, and he had agreed. A plan to begin publication of the fascicles containing the letters E and O while ALSDORF completed the earlier ones was shelved in favour of a joint effort in an attempt to speed up the rate of production. The two editors were therefore in continual correspondence during the preparation of the tenth fascicle, and at the time of ALSDORF's death the whole fascicle was in proof form, and all the changes and corrections which were thought necessary had been indicated. It proved possible, after some delay, to carry out all the Editor-in-Chief's wishes, and the tenth fascicle appeared, a little later than planned, but essentially as ALSDORF himself would have wished it.

Others who were ALSDORF's pupils have written elsewhere about the man as a teacher. It was my privilege to have associated with him as a scholar, in his capacity of Editor-in-Chief of A Critical Pāli Dictionary. Not only did he have an enviable command of English, which enabled him to define clearly and precisely the meanings and usages of Pāli words, but he also showed a rare aptitude for nosing out problems, and for suspecting from a brief quotation and reference in a contributor's article that the commonly accepted meanings of a word did not apply in the particular case. Greatly impressed by his ability to do this, I asked him soon after taking up my editorial duties whether I should check every reference. He replied that it was only necessary to check those which were probably wrong. He added, in explanation, 'It is in the nature of things that we have rather often to weigh possibilities and alternatives. And I am convinced of the truth of what my great and revered Guru LÜDERS told me more than once: what makes a philologist is above all a feeling for what is probable ("Ein Gefühl für das Wahrscheinliche")'.

By this and any other standard LUDWIG ALSDORF was a true philologist. His death is a great loss to Indology as a whole and to Pāli studies in particular. We shall not see his like again.

Cambridge, October 1980.

BIBLIOGRAPHICAL ADDITIONS

1960

Besides supplementary abbreviations and bibliographical additions the following list contains corrections to the Epilegomena to vol. I. The sections A.a. etc. and the systematic classification of the texts 1.1 etc. correspond with those used in the Epilegomena to vol. I. In this list however the section B.b. only includes books and articles occasionally quoted in the CPD. — The editors would be very grateful to receive information concerning books and articles important for Pāli philology and Buddhism in generat.
